
LETTER TO THE MANAGEMENT

October 12, 2016

Dear Sir/Madam:

I am writing to protest the fact that the stinky Texas Tigers are once again in the Vacation Rotation. They have been on vacation at least three times as many weeks as any of us other cats, who are waiting patiently for our turns.

It's not bad enough that Joseph Lion, the throwback to the 80's with his long hair, always gets to extend his vacations, but Bu and I had ours cut short the last time.

(By the way, someone really needs to tell him that short hair is in style now; there's no need for him to keep trying to look like a member of a rock band any more with that long mane. Who does he think he is, Bon Jovi?)

Those stinky Texas Tigers always get preferential treatment because they are publicity hounds and play up to the cameras when the media is there. Honestly, sometimes they embarrass us other cats with their antics. We are predators, after all – not cuddly playthings. The only one of the three who seems to remember that is Amanda.

I demand that Bu and I get our well-deserved vacation next, and that we be allowed to extend it by one week to make up for all the time we have missed. We eagerly await your response.

Sincerely,

Cameron Lion
(Sent via Lori D., Secretary to the Cats)