
LETTER TO THE MANAGEMENT

June 7, 2018

Dear Sir/Madam:

The residents of the gated community known as Big Cat Rescue had a meeting regarding the upcoming Walkabout to be held on Saturday, November 3.

1 – Nikita Lioness requests an admission price be levied on anyone who wishes to visit her, specifically an offering of chicken. This would mean someone would have to be there to collect this offering; she has delegated this task to her Lady-in-Waiting, Robin. This would also involve having a refrigerator/freezer placed near her enclosure temporarily so that the chicken would not spoil in the heat.

2 – In case of emergency, Gilligan the Canada Lynx has offered to serve as an emergency warning siren since his call can be heard throughout the complex.

3 – Beacher has offered to narrate tours of the complex (we all know how he likes to talk).

4 – Manny Jaguar suggests oxygen tanks and fainting couches be placed near his enclosure to revive all the ladies he anticipates will pass out when they see how adorable he is. (Such a humble fellow.)

5 – Priya Tiger requests that an extra pool be added to her enclosure for the sole purpose of splashing water on unsuspecting visitors – just to help them cool off in the heat, of course, not because she enjoys it.

6 – Amanda Tiger also had some suggestions. However, the censors would not allow us to share them. Including them here would mean a lot of black lines on the page...

Another meeting is planned in the near future, and you can be sure we will share any further suggestions as the time for the Walkabout gets closer.

Sincerely,

Mr. B. Cakes, Office Manager
(Sent via Lori D., Secretary to the Cats)
